Making your home more energy efficient

When it comes to making your home more energy-efficient, it's essential to consider all aspects, and your windows and doors play a crucial role in this endeavour. The energy performance of these fixtures is influenced by numerous factors, and it's not always evident just by looking at their construction. However, you don't have to navigate this complex landscape blindly. There's a reliable rating scheme designed to help you find the most energy-efficient options for your home.

Windows and doors are rated from A++ to E based on their energy efficiency. This rating evaluates materials, frame, glass, heat loss, draught prevention, and solar gain. Higher ratings mean better energy efficiency, helping you cut energy consumption in your home.

Enhancing energy efficiency with uPVC windows and doors

When it comes to boosting your home's energy efficiency, uPVC windows and doors offer distinct advantages over traditional timber.

Superior Insulation

uPVC is an exceptional insulator, outperforming timber. It keeps your home comfortable year-round by preventing heat loss and drafts, reducing your reliance on heating and cooling systems.

Low maintenance

uPVC is virtually maintenance-free, while timber requires regular upkeep, saving you time and money in the long run.

Durability

uPVC products have a longer lifespan, reducing the environmental impact associated with manufacturing and disposal compared to timber.

Sustainability Recycling

uPVC can be recycled multiple times, contributing to a sustainable and eco-friendly choice for your home.

Prioritising safety & security

In addition to energy efficiency, safety and security are paramount when it comes to selecting windows and doors for your home. VEKA systems prioritise your peace of mind with rigorous standards of security.

All VEKA systems meet the PAS24 standard, which is a comprehensive testing standard designed to assess the security performance of windows and doors. This ensures that they can withstand a certain level of attempted intrusion by opportunistic burglars, offering you enhanced security for your home.

Furthermore, the “Secured by Design” initiative ensures that VEKA products are accredited by the Police for their security features. This endorsement provides an extra layer of confidence in the safety and protection offered by VEKA windows and doors.

By choosing VEKA systems for your home, you're not only enhancing energy efficiency and sustainability but also prioritising the safety and security of your family and property. It's a comprehensive solution that combines all these essential aspects to create a more comfortable, eco-friendly, and secure living environment.

Sustainability

Prioritising Sustainability

Sustainability is a critical consideration when selecting windows and doors for your home. Not all materials are created equal in terms of environmental impact. Among the options available, uPVC stands out as one of the most energy-efficient choices.

Unlike wood, which is porous, uPVC is an excellent insulator, effectively preventing heat from escaping your home. In contrast, aluminium can lead to thermal bridging and increased condensation, which can undermine your energy-efficiency goals.

Moreover, the window and door industry has made substantial strides in promoting the recycling and reuse of uPVC materials. Old uPVC frames have gained value in the recycling process, sparing them from ending up in landfills. A typical uPVC window frame boasts a long lifespan of around 35 years, and it can be recycled up to ten times, extending its life cycle to an impressive 350 years. After reaching the end of its useful life as a window frame, uPVC can still be repurposed for other applications, reducing waste and further benefiting the environment.
